From Director's Desk

India has been trying to strengthen the Alternate Dispute Resolution (ADR) mechanism for quite some time now. In the first week of August, 2023 it has got a much-needed fillip when the new Mediation Bill was passed by both the houses of Parliament.

In parallel, SEBI has been working on a unified investor complaints/dispute redressal mechanism founded on the ADR mechanism. On July 31, 2023 SEBI brought out a comprehensive guidelines for this unified framework starting from SEBI's own redressal mechanism, SEBI Complaints Redress System (SCORES). The new system enables escalation of the complaints from the level of SCORES, if not satisfied, to that of mediation or/and to arbitration seamlessly. For this purpose, a unified online platform is the answer. In addition, the ADR solutions available to investors against listed entities, Registrar and Transfer Agents and broking intermediaries through the exchanges' investor grievance redressal mechanism [IGRC] has been expanded to cover a large number of other intermediaries in the securities markets through this new platform. A notification bringing other intermediaries within the ambit of the ADR framework was notified by SEBI on July 03, 2023.

The third element of the framework is the application of modern technology hoisting the entire process of grievance/complaints/dispute redress on to an online platform with the support of Online Dispute Resolution (ODR) organisations which have sprung up in India in the recent past in line with the growing focus on adopting ADRs in diverse areas of disputes. Greater adoption of the ADR mechanism and that too through online mode [ODR] will necessitate the services of more professionals to support the growing demand. The success of the system will therefore depend on the quality of professionals in conducting the proceedings and passing the awards/orders by following a systematic, light-touch [not the procedure- intensive court system that many of the ADR practioners follow now] procedure, following the basic principles of natural justice and with deep understanding of the nuances of the functioning of securities markets, its participants as well as the securities laws/regulations. In short, the ODR professionals need to have a good understanding of the principles of natural justice, laws of evidence, contract, arbitration and SEBI regulations as well as the practices of listed entities and market intermediaries. It is a tall order. Professional training institutes have to fill up the gaps in knowledge, skills and capacity of the mediation and arbitration professionals.

Fitch downgrades US debt

Fitch Ratings downgraded its US debt rating from the highest AAA rating to AA+, citing "a steady deterioration in standards of governance." The downgrade comes after lawmakers negotiated up until the last minute on a debt ceiling deal earlier this year, risking the nation's first default. Fitch Ratings repeatedly highlighted the January 6th insurrection as a significant concern as it relates to US governance. The credit agency did not mention the insurrection in their full report on the downgrade.

US debt has long been considered the safest of safe havens, but rating cut suggests it has lost some of its luster. The downgrade has potential reverberations on everything from the mortgage rates Americans pay on their homes to contracts carried out all across the world.

Learning on Investment

Let me start with an interesting story. My mentor was narrating her childhood experience. She was eager to learn how to ride a bicycle but she didn't own a bicycle nor her friends had one. She decided to rent a bicycle and the rent per hour was ₹ 25. It was difficult for her to arrange ₹ 25 without the help of her parents. So, she decided to sell an old pile of newspapers lying around her home and go on a bicycle for rent. While riding the bicycle, she and her friends got one hour of new learning experience in the form of a fresh breeze touching their nostrils, hands, and hair. This novel feeling was exhilarating enough for them to learn to ride the bicycle whenever they had a chance. They gradually realized that they can't ride a bicycle on a busy road without self–discipline, perseverance, continuous effort, and most important thing- Action. Every one of them rode the bicycle one by one and learnt to control the bicycle in a few months.

In the same way, my mentor started her first SIP (Systematic Investment Plan) with pocket money of ₹ 500 during her college time while her other friends were spending their pocket money on visiting coffee shops, movie halls, and restaurants. She was determined to invest in SIP by increasing the amount as much as possible by sacrificing a few movies and a few miscellaneous expenditures. Her dedication toward her first investment flourished over the years. She reminded herself about her first learning experience of how she learnt to ride a bicycle. This was the time for her second learning. It helped her to imbibe the best habit to achieve financial freedom and this habit is known as the "Habit of Saving and Investment". She learned and experienced the power of compounding rather than mere knowledge of solving questions using compound interest formulae. She paid her college fees from the returns accumulated from these small and periodic investments. One of her first achievements among many!

It is important to note that resolutions under different frameworks yield different benefits. The companies which are getting rescued by resolution plans had assets, on average, valued at about 17% of the outstanding debt, when they entered the CIRP. Still resolution yielded a much higher return. As we move forward and the legacy cases get over, almost every company may be rescued and creditors could realize their complete claims if CIRP is pressed at early stages of distress, when they have assets valued, above 50% of the outstanding claims.

Time and again, we come across instances of intermediaries such as brokers, investment advisers, research analysts, fund houses, etc., flouting all norms in pursuit of bigger commissions or even committing frauds, putting at risk the hard-earned money of investors. The authors of the article therefore argue that the regulator can perhaps think of developing a credibility scoring system for intermediaries. On the basis of this score, an investor can assess a financial market intermediary and take an informed decision of associating with the right intermediary.

A total of 39 broker defaults occurred between 2017 and 2022. One such episode in 2019 impacted millions of investors—their accounts were frozen and there were delays in transacting their rightfully owned securities and funds. There was no way these investors could access their securities and funds through another broker. Broker default episodes, when there is no broker portability, is marked by forced liquidations that creates risk exposures and eliminates potential risk-taking market participants who are capable of tolerating market risk at a critical time. The author of the article therefore argues that it is time to be ready for broker-portability in India.
