

Setting the context

The laws and regulations that impact the functioning of corporate entities, have been subject to several changes in recent times. At the same time, the composition of many of the Boards of Directors have also undergone change. Many first time Directors have been inducted onto various boards.

It is recognised that the Board is at the highest level of decision-making in a company. It follows that every member of the Board should be able to contribute productively to deliberations in the boardroom, and decision-making consequent thereon. While aspects such as domain familiarity and the understanding of business models would be addressed by the concerned corporate entities, it is necessary for the new members on the Board to have a clear understanding of their roles and responsibilities as also the liabilities attached to Board level positions. Additionally, the whole area of boardroom dynamics, with its behavioural and cultural underpinnings, also require to be recognised and internalised.

About the programme

In order to address this urgent and important requirement, NISM and Excellence Enablers are jointly offering a half-day programme which, in an interactive fashion, will focus on the training requirements of Directors and those who have recently become directors or are on the verge of becoming Directors. The programme will focus on the regulatory and legislative provisions, their practical implications and the manner in which the journey beyond compliance to governance can be undertaken so as to significantly improve the performance of persons who are members of Boards of Directors of corporate entities. While the “what” is addressed in law and the regulations, the “how” is also proposed to be discussed in this programme.
